To whom it may concern,

I met Miriam Puig Terron during the last course 2012/2013, when I was Vice Dean and internship coordinator. I was her tutor for her internship and we have been in touch since then. During that time, I was able to assess Miriam's skills, which I am going to describe below.

First of all, I must highlight the initiative and maturity of the student. She has clear objectives and is determined in striving for them. From the beginning, she showed interest for Human Resources, to such extent that she directly contacted a recognized HR company to do her internship, and she accepted the internship afterwards, although it was unpaid.

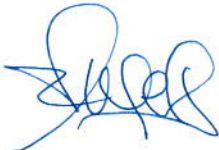

A requirement to complete an internship is the elaboration of an improvement project of the company. Therefore, we met each other a few times throughout the internship. During that time I could realize she is a well-qualified student. She completed the improvement project with a high level of autonomy. It was a very well-written, functional project, which was even put into practice by the company.

Apart from that, she is highly motivated to keep studying and receive training and she has shown to be very brave. This trait has led her to move to England to improve her English while she looks for a master that fits with her personal development objectives.

Finally, thanks to our relationship, I have been able to see other skills of Miriam. She is a hard-worker, receptive person, who is good at establishing positive interactions both with mates and professors.

For that reason, I am delighted to write a highly-positive recommendation for Miriam Puig, both personally and professionally, and I hope you favourably consider her application.

Yours faithfully,
